

CLP Lesson Plan Template

Teacher/s: Yidan Gong

Level: Lower Intermediate 1

Date/Time: July 20, 2022

Objectives:

Students Will Be Able To...

1. put stress on different words in order to point out the difference between one thing and another

Theme: Contrastive Stress

Aim/Skill/Microskill	Activity/Procedure/Stage	Interaction	Time
Review or Preview (if applicable)		T-S, T-SS S-S, S-SS SS-SS
Warm-up:	1.1 Ask students how they feel about the test Linking & Transitioning to rest of lesson
Activity 1: Contrastive stress Today, we are going to do something different. We will have a dictation first, please take out your notebook, I will read three easy sentences, please try to write them done. So, what are the three sentences, are they the same? and how are they different? For the first/second/third sentence, I put the stress on which word? What do they mean by putting stress on different words?	Objective/Language focus: Contrastive stress 1.1 Pre-Stage: 1. Read one sentence three times to students with different stresses. a. I'm STUDYING b. I'm studying c. I AM studying 2. Ask Ss what they heard, are they the same sentence, and how are they different. 3. Write the sentences on board by using different color of markers 4. Ask students if they have different meanings. 5. Emphasize that the first one is focused on "studying", but not something else, not writing. 6. Emphasize the second one is focused on "I", but not anyone else. 7. Emphasize the third one is focused on "am", but not at any other time,	T-SS	10

Now, I am going to randomly choose one of them to read, and you are going to tell me, which is a proper question to it, ok? Who wants to try it? We will now do something more challenging; I will give you a sheet work 4 different sentences. Please carefully read them, and circle the word that you think should have the stress. When you are done, check with your partner to see if you have circled out the same words. Then, you are going to do a role play, each of you are gonna read one sentence. Remember to put the right stress Now, let's here from each group. Here is one more sentence that we will practice. You are going to work with your partner, and try to write 4 different versions of conversation. For example, If I want to mention IS, what would be an answer for it? No, it's not. So, make decisions on the stress first, and write a negative answer according to it.	it's right now. 8. Practice reading these three sentences 9. Show Ss the scenarios on slides, and ask them which word we should put the stress on. 10. Practice reading the sentences again. 1.2. During Stage: 1. Give students a worksheet, ask them to read the sentences on it, and circle the word that we should put the stress on. a. John's car is blue. No! John's car is white. b. Peter's car is white. No! John's car is white. c. John's truck is white. No! John's car is white d. John's car isn't white. No! John's car is white. 2. Groupwork: Ask students to check with their partners if they have circled the same word. 3. Go through the stressed words together. 4. Groupwork: Ask pairs to practice each sentence by taking turns to be A and B. 5. Each group present one conversation in class, and T asks others which one they put the stress on. 6. Lead Ss to the sentences again, and ask if they've found any pattern or rule that could help us decide which one we should put the stress on. 7. Indicate that we put the stress on a word when we see a contrast, explain what "contrast" means. 8. Let Ss guess what the name for this kind of stress is. "Contrastive Stress" 9. Lead Ss to the conversation again and ask them to circle the contrast.	S-SS S-S SS-T S-S	15
---	--	---	-----------

Transition to Wrap-up: We've learned contrastive stress today, tomorrow, we will start our new unit.	1.3 Post-Stage: 1. Information gap activity: each group gets one scenario, and student A and student B get different information. T asks them to make a conversation based on the context they have by including contrastive stress in it. 2. Each group presents their conversation in class. Ask other students to find where the contrastive stress is. T writes them on board Tangible Outcome & Assessment 2. Students will find different stresses by listening to one sentence three times 3. Students will know different meanings by putting stress on different words in the same sentence 4. Students will practice saying the same sentence but putting different stresses each time 5. Students will put stresses on different words based on the meaning they want to convey		20
Wrap-up	Lesson Evaluation Procedures: Ask students if they have any questions about contrastive stress, and give homework

This section is mandatory

1. Materials:

Pronunciation worksheet

2. Anticipated Problems & Suggested Solutions:

Problem: Ss may have difficulties putting stress on the specific word they want

Solution: Ask students to exaggerate more on the word they want to stress

3. Contingency Plans (what you will do if you finish early? need to cut LP? etc.):

If we still have time, we will have a quick preview on the next unit.

4. Post-Lesson Reflections:

I did not give enough and clear instruction for the last activity. Ss were kind of confused and did not know what to do. I should have modeled it and made it clearer since it was the first time for them to do this kind of activity. Also, I should have made the texts more understandable and easier, Ss didn't know "adopted", "shelter", and "heard from", this activity was difficult to them. I spent a lot of time explaining, but the result was very good, every group had such long and interesting conversations.