Activity 1: Warm up and Review Greetings. Let's start with a review of sounds. What sounds did we talk about in the last class? Remember the tongue twisters that we did? Does anyone want to be brave and read one aloud? You can choose one of them to	Purpose/objective/focus: Warm up and get students in the mood of speaking English. Review and reinforce the grammar that students learned in the last unit by going over the common mistakes on the test. 1.1 Pre-Stage: 1. Have students talk about what sounds we talked about in class can they remember. 2. Present students with tongue twisters with the sounds that the students practiced in the previous class and let students read it aloud 1.2. During Stage:	S-SS T-S	5 that you are planning to learn this year?

Activity 2: How do you like to learn new things? What are some study methods you know? Which study method do you prefer and why? Now let's go into breakout rooms and talk with your partner: what are some learning paths you have attempted and what benefit did you gain from it? For example, I would ask ..., ... what learning path have you tried? And ... would say... (go to college, take online classes, attend conferences/workshops, study on your own...) Here I have a list of some preference questions, look at	Purpose/objective/focus: 2.1 Pre-Stage: 1. Ask students to talk about what are some ways that they acquire new knowledge? 2. Summarize the methods and write on the slides 2.2. During Stage: 1. Let students get into breakout rooms and talk about the which learning paths have they tried and what are some learning benefits of the paths 2. Students share with the class and teacher asks for their preference on learning based on what the student just talked about 2.3 Post-Stage: 1. Present students with a list of statements and let students decide if it is true or false for them and share the reason why 2. Ask students how to express preferences based on what we talked about so far	S-SS T-SS S-S S-SS T-S S-SS T-S	10 10 20

them and think about what would you prefer? Are these statements true or false for you? So what do we say when we want to tell other people what we like better between the two choices? We use I would prefer/rather... Transition to #3: Now we know how to tell other people about our own preferences. What about asking others for their preferences? I'm gonna turn the class to Yidan and she will walk you through.	3. Use students' preferences to Introduce "I'd prefer to..." and "I'd rather..." and the negative forms. T-/peer-/self-Assessment 1. Students will be able to speak about their preferences on learning using "I'd prefer to..." and "I'd rather..."
Activity 3: When was the last time you asked someone's preference? How did you ask? For example, yesterday, it was raining in New York, I asked Yuhan if she prefers to stay at home or go out on a rainy day. Put that in the chat. How many options did I offer her? The first one is? And the second one is? Now, I want you to think about the last time you asked someone	Purpose/objective/focus: Would rather do something, would prefer to do something. 2.1 Pre-Stage: 1. Ask students when was the last time they asked someone's preference. Let them type the two options in the chat. 2. Let students say how did they ask someone to choose from two options 3. Give students the form: a. Would you prefer to... or...	T-SS SS-T	5

to choose an option, and please type the two options in the chat, like what I just did. So, how did you ask someone to choose an option? So, when we want someone to make a decision, we ask “Would you prefer to... or...?” or “Would you rather... or...?”. Now, I am going to give you some scenarios, and you will think about what kind of questions you can ask by using these two forms. So, you will think about two options that could happen at that place. For example, what kind of decisions can you ask someone to make at a food court? Do we all understand what we are going to do in breakout rooms? Practice both forms. Transition to #3: Now, we all know how to ask these	b. Would you rather... than... 2.2. During Stage: 1. Breakout rooms: give students a list of options, ask them to practice asking questions according to different scenarios given a. At a food court b. In a fitting room c. At a hotel front desk d. in a bus terminal where also connects to the subway e. At the grocery store cashier 1. Have each group perform one pair of options, each student gives one form. 2.3 Post-Stage: 1. Ask students again how do we ask someone’s preference by offering two options 2. Let students write down one of the sentences their classmates have talked about in the chat. T-/peer-/self-Assessment 1. Students will use the forms we focus on in this unit to ask someone’s preference. 2. Students will think about different questions they can ask in different real-life situations.	SS-SS SS-T SS-T	20 3

questions, but there is a specific way in pronunciation that we do while asking this type of questions
Activity 4: Now, I am going to play an audio for you, it will read two sentences. You don't need to write them down, but please listen to them carefully, and you will tell me how the intonation goes, whether it is rising or falling. Are you ready? Let's spend two minutes practicing with your partners. And correct your partner if they are wrong. Practice reading these two questions. Now, we all know how to ask and answer this type of question. And we are going to practice this in conversations.	Purpose/objective/focus: pronunciation on “would you prefer to do something or something”. 4.1 Pre-Stage: 1. Play the audio which reads two sentences a. Would you prefer to study online or at a school? b. Would you rather learn something fun or useful? 2. Ask students the pattern they found in terms of intonation 3. Tell students the rising and falling intonation while speaking the two options 4. Let students practice speaking it 4.2. During Stage: 1. Divide students into pairs and give them two versions of the	T-SS SS-T	5

You are going to work in pairs, and you will go to different links and ask different questions to your partners. I've written two options there for you to ask, and you will use the form we learned today to ask the question and also answer your partner's questions. You can see more details when you go to the document. Ok, do we all have the document ready in front of you? Transition to Wrap-Up: __ That's all we have for today's class, before we end the class, Please type one take-away you have today.	worksheet, each worksheet contains different paired options, and partners take turns to ask the question and answer. 2. Each group perform one sentence 4.3 Post-Stage: 1. Tell students I am going to read two sentences to them again, but with wrong intonation, let students identify what kind of mistake I made. T-/peer-/self-Assessment 1. Students will know how to ask the question with correct intonation. 2. Students also practice how to answer the questions	S-S T-SS	20 5
Wrap-up	Have students write what they learned in this class in the chat

2. Anticipated Problems & Suggested Solutions:

Students might ignore the rising and falling intonation while naturally speaking, a possible solution is to practice more and monitor their speaking in the breakout rooms while doing the activity.

Students might mix the two forms while speaking, a possible solution is to ask them to practice just one form at a time.

3. Contingency Plans (what you will do if you finish early? need to cut LP? etc.):

If we spend more time doing activities, change the post-stage for the last activity by summarizing and reviewing the pronunciation.

4. Post-Lesson Reflections:

I gave very clear instructions to students before each activity, However, when I was asking students to report back on what questions they can ask based on the scenarios, I should have given them more feedback and asked other students to answer the questions to make it more interactive.

Activity 1: Review Can anyone remind us what we learned so far in this unit? 1. Would you rather? Would you prefer to? (Intonation) 2. I'd rather do and I'd rather prefer to 3. Describe how to do something, by + gerund Now we are going to do a little bit of exercise on these forms. I want you to fill in the blanks with a partner, and try to practice	Warm up: Divide students into groups of 3 to talk about a recent travel experience they had. Purpose/objective/focus: review on would rather and would prefer 1.1 Pre-Stage: 1. Talk about everyone's learning plan for summer, and ask students if they prefer to take class online or in person, and why. 1.2. During Stage: 1. Give students the conversation practice on textbook page 51, and	T-SS SS-T T-SS SS-T	5 25

reading the sentences. And be careful with your intonation. Let me give you the link first. Type your answer on the slide. Let's look at this picture. What questions can we ask here if we wanna hear someone's choice? Anyone can answer this question? So, it looks like we all have different choices of learning according to different habits. As for me, When I am choosing a class to take, the first consideration is time. I'm not a morning person, so I choose to teach or take classes in the afternoon or at night. How about everyone else, do we have any early birds here? What is the opposite of an early bird? Ok, I have two pictures to show you. Let's see what's the difference. So, there is so much clutter on the desk. Transition to #2: Now let's see what are some other learning ways people have	let students think about which one they prefer to do and how to do it by using "by + gerund". 2. Breakout rooms: talk in pairs, one student asks the question and the other one answers. Let students practice the intonation in questions of choice. 3. Let students report in the main room and check their pronunciation. 1.3 Post-Stage: 1. Lead students to the CLP website, and ask students what questions they can ask their classmates. For example, "Would you rather take morning classes or evening classes?" and "Would you like to take a grammar course or a writing course?" T-/peer-/self-Assessment 1. Students will ask their partners to choose an option by using would rather and would prefer 2. Students will have the right intonation when asking the question of choice 3. Students will describe how to do something by using "by + gerund"	S-S SS-T SS-SS	10

to share with the rest of the class what you wrote about in one sentence. Let's look at the sentence you wrote. People from other groups, what information did you get from the sentence? Now look at all three sentences, how would you organize the sentences to make up a small paragraph that makes sense? You can now open your book and turn to page 55, read the text on your own and identify any words or expressions that you don't understand. After reading about Kelly and Maria's learning style, think about how you usually learn. Write a paragraph describing your own learning style. You could write about what environment you prefer to study in, what learning methods you usually use and would you rather study with a group or on your own?	9. Let students read the whole article and look for words they don't know. 10. Lead students to guess their unknown words by reading the context. 2.3 Post-Stage: 1. Ask students to write what they learned from this article and explain their own way of learning. 2. Take a piece of writing that one student wrote and go over it with the entire class. Ask the class to help revise it. T-/peer-/self-Assessment 1. Students are able to summarize a paragraph into one sentence that tells the main idea of the paragraph 2. Student sare able to make predictions about the structure and the content of an article based on the main sentence 3. Students are able to reflect on the reading and write to compare themselves with the people in the reading	T-S SS-S	25

2. Anticipated Problems & Suggested Solutions:

Problem: The reading section can be a bit challenging for the students and it generally takes a long time for students in this class to read and write.

Solution: We are devoting a lot of time to the reading section and progressing slowly. If the students need more time to finish the activity, we will distribute more time to it.

3. Contingency Plans (what you will do if you finish early? need to cut LP? etc.):

If the students need more time on the early stages of the second activity, cut step 8 of the during stage.

4. Post-Lesson Reflections:

For reading, I should have scaffolded more in the pre-stage like practicing how to organize sentences in mixed orders because students have never tried this kind of activity before.

There was not enough time for students to write their own ways of learning. previous activities took longer than I thought. The lesson plan was a little bit ambitious, I should have planned it with more than one class.
